X-FORCE... WOW

Posted by Mtn. Runner - 2008/11/06 01:00

So i went to a local pro shop here in Utah to let a few arrows fly and decided to finally shoot the new x-force. I honestly had no intention of getting it, i just thought it was a bunch of goobly garp that people were saying how amazing this "speed bow" is. Well withing a few shots i was hopping on the band wagon. But i wanted to see what kind of speed it would really produce for my 28 inch draw. So i shot a 390 grain arrow through the chronograph and i about pooped my shorts when it said 314. WOW . The owner made me one heck of a deal and sold it to me for $650. So needless to say i got an early christmas present . My wife ujst wont let me put any gadgets until after Christmas whisc i am getting all new fuse gear to pimp it out and a new Smart rest by nap. I am pretty excited.

I talked to a pse pro staffer.They have had a problem with the limbs cracking.They havent had a recall on them yet.Because they havent had enough of them crack yet.

I think PSE is on to something. It's a pretty incredible bow.

I agree this thing is nice. It really surprised me. i will be getting around 85+ lbs of kinetic energy. With only a 70 lb draw.

Yea if mathews has a bow that is 360 and it shoots good that is insane and will fly off the shelves.

I was pretty impressed with the X-Force yesterday when I shot it. That bow with 80 pound limbs on it would be amazing but I agree that if Mathews comes out with a bow that shoots faster and has a smoother draw cycle it will be hard to keep in stock. I am betting that Mathews will have a new aggressive cam design but still be single cam, a new string stop, speed nocks built into some tpe of custom string, and reduce the brace height to around 6 inches to get more speed. Just my guess...

maybe you could get 80 pound limbs and be the first guy to smoke two cape buffaloes with a single arrow... or be the first guy to shoot at two cape buffaloes and get gored to death. Either way, we here at bowcast would salute your testicular fortitude and wash away any negative implications, just as the liberal media has done for their fearless leader.

A guy whose stupidity got him killed by a cape buffalo is way cooler than a guy whose stupidity got him elected president!

Maybe I missed something, what does 80# limbs and KE have to do with liberal media and presidential elections?

Unless you drop it off a cliff before shooting it.

Had to commet on this one.The Xforce is a awesome machine.The 09 is even better.I am hunting with a 08 set on 30in draw and 80pds and with my strings and tuning I am shooting a 432gr arrow 341fps.I think its around 110pds KE.I have shot 4 whitetails with it with 2 blade rage heads and hit one decent buck in the shoulder and it went through like hot butter and stuck in the ground.I joined PSEs staff last year and probably setup and tuned 50-60 Xforces this year and am still amazed that a speed bow can shoot so sweet.As far as limb failures ,the only ones they had were from dry fires and being pressed in the wrong bow presses.There hasnt been any problem with the limbs and they are actually tough as nails.Everyone I setup met or exceeded IBO ratings.You wont be dissapointed with that bow.The 09 is a tad faster with 80% letoff with the new GX cams.
